

Writing Minor

Degree Type Minor

The minor in writing provides students with the opportunity to use writing as a tool to understand themselves and the world in which they live. Students who enroll in this minor should be interested in making writing an important element in their lives both during and after their college careers. Students who complete the minor should understand the logistics, information, skills, concepts and discipline necessary to have their writings published. Students enrolled in the minor can explore the challenges of writing fiction, nonfiction, journalism, poetry and script writing.

Requirements:

The Writing minor consists of 20 credits, in addition to WRT 101. WRT 201 is required and at least 12 of the remaining 16 credits should be at the 300 level.
